Copy of letter No 1952-56-P, Political Department, Political Branch, dated Shillong, the 22nd March 1918, from the Hon'ble Mr. J E. Webster, C.I.E., I.C.S., Chief Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Assam, to all Officers Commanding Labour Companies in France.

On the eve of his retirement, after 36 years of service in India, Sir Archdale Earle desires me to convey to the officers and men of the labour company under your command his kindest greeting and warm appreciation of what they have done for their King and Country. The Hillmen of Assam were among the first in all India to come forward in response to the call for assistance in France. It must have been a tremendous plunge into the unknown for men who for the most part knew nothing of western life and civilization and had never even seen the sea, and it is all the more to their honour that they were not deterred by fear and that on arrival in France they so readily adapted themselves to the conditions there and have done so much valuable work. The Chief Commissioner has received from time to time reports of the doings of these companies, and has followed them with the greatest interest.

He understands that in a few months' time they will be coming back to their homes, as shipping is made available. Doubtless they have suffered from home sickness, from the strange loss of their surroundings, and from the inclemency of the weather, but he trusts that when they find themselves once more safe at home legitimate pride in having done their duty will more than compensate them for what they have undergone, and that their experiences in the end will leave not unpleasant memories. If they had been staying in France, Sir Archdale Earle would have hoped to be able to do something in helping to keep them happy and comfortable, but as it is he is not likely to see them again and can only wish them safe journeys to their homes and bid them farewell.

ORDER NO. 3 OF 1917—18

Government has decided that all persons going to France shall be exempted from coolie work and from payment of House-tax. While this order should be strictly adhered to great care will have to be taken that the concession is not abused. From some petitions which have been presented it is certain that persons will claim exemption who are not entitled to it. Mr. Hezlett ordered that "The families of labourers who go will get Kuli Aw when they are away and when they come back they will get Kuli Aw for life. From this it is clear that the exemption for life is for the individual who goes to France and temporary exemption only is given to the family. The term family is rather a loose one, and must now be defined. The family should represent the house from which the labourer came and care must be taken to prevent the inclusion of persons who were not residing in his house when he enrolled as a labourer. Exemption from payment $\frac{2}{3}$ of $\frac{1}{3}$ House-tax is for life and should commence from the date of enrolment of the corps (i. e. from April 1917). The exemption will be granted for the house in which the labourer resided before he left and which he occupied on his return. Care will be taken that other families which paid house-tax separately from him before enrolment are not allowed to take up their permanent residence in the labourer's house in order to profit by the concession.

In some cases labourers have no male relatives and send their women folk to live with some other persons. During the absence of the labourer with the corps the person in whose house his relations are living may claim the exemption from house-tax, but not from coolie work unless the chief certifies that he is working in the cultivation of the absent labourer.
